

ABSTRACT

An improved method for forming a flash memory is disclosed. A self-aligned source implanted pocket located underneath and around the source line junction is formed after the field oxide between adjacent word lines is removed, and before or after the self-aligned source doping is carried out, so that the configuration of the implanted boron follows the source junction profile.